Oh, July! The bright skies and the Texas heat. A marvelous time to stay inside and quilt. A great time to finish that quilt for the auction in September. If you haven't yet, be sure to see Jean Hardies at the guild meeting and volunteer to help make the auction a success.

The Ethel Howey grant is available to anyone who has been a member in good standing for at least two years. Is there a teacher whose class you are dying to take? A technique you want to investigate? An aspect of quilting history you can't wait to delve into? Perhaps the money awarded with the grant could help you achieve your goal. The information and the application form are in the newsletter and on our website. Don't hesitate – put your hat in the ring! The deadline for applying is August 1.

Enjoy this beautiful weather and don't forget the sunscreen. See you at the guild meeting! - - Mary

7.18 Pieces of the Past, 99. Polka Dots by Ellen Hernandez

Using dots in adornment during Medieval times in Europe was considered unpleasant like a rash or serious illness of smallpox or leprosy. Later from the 1500s to the 1700s it was common to wear facial 'patches' called 'mouches' of taffeta, velvet, silk, mouse skin, or paper attached with mastic to cover scars and pockmarks. Usually black, these dots (or stars, moons, diamonds) eventually developed into a fashion statement for the upper class signifying specific moods according to their location on the face. Other groups also embraced the dot such as in Buddhist dot mandalas, Hindu bindi head paintings, Islamic architectural designs, and Inuit tattoos.

Using dots in fabric increased in popularity with the invention of the raised dot embroidery machine in the early 1800s in St. Gallen, Switzerland. Evenly spaced dots, called dotted swiss, were sewn onto sheer or lightweight fabrics.

Large coin sized dots on fabric called Thalertupfen were used later in the 1800s in Europe. They were similar in size to the German currency coin of the time, the Thaler. Dots were also called quinconce, from the five diagonal dots on the side of a die.

The polka dance craze in the mid-1800s in Bohemia (now Czech Republic) inspired using the name polka for jackets, hats, and eventually the dot with 'polka dot' referring to 'little girl.'

Polka dot highlights:

~1857 - Godey's Lady's Book was the first to print the term polka dots referring to rows of embroidery on a scarf.

~1865 - Monet's 'Luncheon on the Grass' features a woman in a blue dotted dress.

~1926 - Miss America Norma Smallwood was photographed in a polka dot swimsuit.

~1928 - Disney introduced Minnie Mouse in a polka dot dress.

~1940 - Frank Sinatra had a hit song - Polka Dots and Moonbeams. A fabric print with the same name was created.

~1940s - Christian Dior's 'New Look' with dotted dresses worn by stars such as Lucille Ball, Liz Taylor.

~1951 - Marilyn Monroe posed in a polka dot bikini, and she had that famous facial beauty spot.

~1960 - Brian Hyland's hit 'Itsy Bitsy Teenie Weenie Yellow Polkadot Bikini.'

~1960s - Japanese artist Yayoi Kusama's dot paintings.

~1962 - Marvel Comic released super hero Polka-dot man.

~1965 - Bob Dylan's cover album with green polka dot shirt.

~King of the Mountains cyclist in tour de France wears a polka dot jersey.

~ National polka dot day - January 22.

The British royals love wearing spots.

And polka dots are increasingly popular for quilters, found in many sizes on ribbons, patterns, and fabric.
