President's Letter

Last week my sister Gail showed me a Capper's Weekly quilt pattern that belonged to our late grandmother. The pattern appears to be unused. The envelope is undated, but the postage meter stamp on the envelope (two and a half cents) screams "vintage". This Black-Eyed Susan pattern was published under the name Kate Marchbanks. A little investigation revealed this as a pen name for longtime Capper's Weekly editor Louise Fowler Roote. Anyway, Gail and I discussed trying the pattern. Gail would do hers in bright, modern fabrics. I would use retro fabrics resembling those available to Grandma. I won't be able to duplicate the quality of Grandma's work, but quilting brings back wonderful memories of her.

Did you vendors sell your stash of goodies at July's Treasure Hunt? Did you shoppers find bargains galore? It certainly seemed like participants on both sides of the tables were having a great time.

You have probably noticed the labyrinth model near the windows in All Saints Hall. Lani Nunley asked me to announce that it is now completed and is available to our Guild members for contemplation and conversation. It sounds like a great place to check out in cooler weather.

Did you contribute patriotic blocks for July's double four-patch challenge? Challenge winner Bernie Ferris looked so happy when Viki Ash drew her name. I know we can look forward to seeing those blocks one day in a project for Community Quilt Angels. Remember to check our website for the 2 x 4 block instructions for August. I appreciate these simple patterns that help us use fabrics we have on hand.

Our 2023 GSAQG show will be here before we know it. Let's get those quilt entries and silent auction items in. I hope individuals, bees, or groups of friends will contribute celebration ads for the program. Don't forget to sign up for at least one two-hour volunteer shift at the show. Sandy Doyle and her committee have put in countless hours planning this wonderful event for us. I know we each want to be a part of its success.

2023 Summer Retreat - Winter in July!

Newcombe Tennis Ranch

We had a total of 29 retreaters attend this year's summer retreat. Everyone enjoyed quilting with others, sharing ideas, and learning from each other. Seeing the beautiful work of such a talented group is always a treat.

We received fun surprises each day, had door prize drawings, made a fabric "pod let" for the group project, and everyone who played the left/right/center dice game was a winner.

A special thanks to Deanne for inviting our group to the Quilt Haus. It is great to shop with your quilty friends and door prizes are always fun. Thanks, Quilt Haus!

Pieces of the Past: Irons

Ellen Hernandez

The need to shape and smooth fabric was the source of many inventions. The Chinese used hot metal for ironing well over a thousand years ago, as did the Koreans - though Koreans often used ironing sticks, too, beating the cloth rhythmically on stone. Archeologists discovered 'linen smoothers' made of round, dark glass in many Viking women's graves. Other European cultures used stone, glass, bones, and wood for smoothing long before forged metal irons were created. A screw-press was introduced to Europe by the Romans. As the design developed, the press was a practical piece of furniture for storage.

The Scandinavians and Dutch carved elaborate mangle boards to smooth items larger than clothing, such as linens, on a wooden roller. A special mangle was often made by a groom for his bride. The oldest known mangle dates to 1566. Their design spread as far east as Russia.

Glass smoothers with handles were called slickers or slickstones and were standard pieces from the late Middle Ages to the 19th century. Often made of marble, they are a collector's item.

The first simple flat irons were forged by blacksmiths in the late Middle Ages. Two irons were required, one to be used while the other heated on a fire or stove. Other names for irons were *sadiron*s from an old word meaning solid, and goose from the shape of the curved handle. Some irons were made of earthenware, terracotta, or soapstone. The hot handles had to be covered with pads or rags and after awhile removable wooden handles were created. Spitting on the iron was common to test for the desired temperature. It was a chore to keep the irons clean, rust free, and smooth to prevent damage to fabrics.

An improvement on the flat iron was the ox-tongue, box or slug iron. A chunk of metal was heated and then inserted into the iron body. Some of these slug irons could rotate on the handle and had a variety of surfaces, such as fluting and embossing for special tailoring. Charcoal could be inserted to hold heat longer if there were air holes in the iron. In India, burning coconut shells were used instead, and can still be found in use in areas where power outages are common.

Gas irons were next on the scene. Fuels consisted of kerosene, ethanol, whale oil, natural gas, carbide gas and gasoline. Coleman's gas iron was made in popular colors - blue, turquoise, red, green, and tan. Fuel irons sold well after World War II in areas that had not received electricity, and into the 1960s in parts of Canada and to the Amish. Henry Seely of New York patented the electric iron in 1882. Steam irons came in the 1950s.

Interesting Facts: The world's largest collection of irons is housed in Gochsheim Castle near Karlsruhe, Germany. There is an international Pressing Iron and Trivet Collectors of America club that has an annual convention and a quarterly newsletter; Info@PressingIronAndTrivetCollectors.org. Two detailed books about irons are Show and Tell by Ton van der Tonnekreek and Even More Irons By Irons by David Irons.

July 2023 Quilt Show Update
September 22nd & 23rd, 2023 --- Sandy Doyle & Gail Clover
"Weathering the Storms Together"

The excitement continues to build as the quilt show is only six weeks away!! I am proud to announce that after many hours these past two years of planning, problem solving, and implementing tasks, the show is coming together. Thank you thank you to the many people who have helped in this endeavor. I am also proud and pleased to announce that we have sold 3000 raffle tickets and will sell more at the show.

Last important tasks:

- Please sign up for a shift to work at the quilt show as we need all hands-on deck. Remember, four hours will get you free entry to the show.
- All outstanding quilt entry fees, complete description paragraphs, and pictures are due at the August guild meeting. No quilt entries will be accepted after this date!!!
- Continue to sign up for appraisal appointments found online under quilt show.

Advertise, Advertise, Advertise! I need your continued help getting the word out about the show. Now is the time to focus on communities outside the quilting community. I have included a digital copy of the rack card and digital flyer for your convenience. Many community bulletin boards will allow posting of these documents. The flyer is geared to attracting community outside of the quilting world. Please help to advertise the show via social media and tagging Alzafar (which will help reach others) and our wonderful vendors. The vendors want us to do well, and they also want to be successful. The vendor list can be found on our website under the show. Realize that our vendors are an integral income piece necessary to having a quilt show. Without our vendors, we could not support a show. Encourage others to do some early Holiday shopping. I already know which vendors I will be purchasing from, and I am looking forward to it.

Once again,
Thank you for your continued support and encouragement!!

To all the wonderful people who attended the recent Treasure Hunt and were so kind to purchase my fabrics to give them new homes and useful purposes, I want to give my sincere thank you very much. I appreciate especially so many of you liked the same fabric designs that I like, and I hope to see them show up in the Bring and Brag sessions of future meetings. Thank you to the Guild for putting on this event.

Donations needed for Silent Auction!

We still need lots more! We need items to sell in the silent auction at our show. The items can be quilts, any size, tote bags, and other items quilts folk will be interested in purchasing. You can turn them into the show table at our guild meetings through August. We won't be selling fabric or kits so that we do not compete with our vendors. Help us out - Please Donate!

Thanks, Sandra Lowell
